

Darron Todd served 23 in the Marine Corps; 13 as an enlisted man and 10 as an officer. He was an engineer by trade-specializing in power generation and distribution then in installation of all utility services. He later moved into engineer equipment maintenance. While on active duty he shot rifle and pistol competitions for several years before transitioning to competitive shotgun sports. After retiring from the Marine Corps in 2013, Darron taught High School until 2016. In 2017, Darron began taking NRA Gunsmithing classes at MCC and enrolled in Design Engineering at Delaware Technical and Community College. Realizing that it takes a great deal of money to start and run a business, he went back to work full-time as a construction manager and was a part-time gunsmith. In 2021 he finally left construction and began working full-time as a gunsmith who specializes in shotgun repair and modification. He has studied under Lawrence Pylinski, Don Baughman of Kreighoff International and Andreas Pappas of Kreighoff International.
